

Story Shares Literacy Studio

Reimagined hi-lo books for diverse readers: easy to read. hard to put down.

Key virtual learning solution during- and post-COVID

Story Shares and Your School

Story Shares is a digital library platform with a new kind of high-interest, low-level books for underrepresented middle & high school students.

Our literacy studio serves diverse learners by:

- Continually delivering fresh, culturally relevant, & accessible content
- Providing digital tools that support & strengthen reading & writing skills
- Post-COVID: engaging readers to address unfinished learning & spur growth

School Use Case Examples With Suggested Funding Sources

1) Struggling Readers (low-income): 6th grade Independent Reading

Middle schoolers in Chelsea, MA use the digital library to select 'just right' choices to read on Chromebooks during free reading time. Teachers can monitor reading progress & assign checks for understanding via dashboards.

Funding source: Title I

2) English Language Learners: 7th Grade guided reading groups

Students in San Jose are divided into small groups based on reading level, and teachers select Story Shares books for each group. ELL's use embedded tools such as visual dictionary to support and strengthen comprehension, and select higher level books as skills improve.

Funding source: Title III

3) Students with Disabilities: 9th & 10th grade pull out groups

A high school resource room teacher in NYC selects titles and "book bundle plans" for whole group instruction and literacy support. Students with dyslexia (e.g.) use text-to-speech and BeeLine Reader to increase access to text.

Funding source: ESSA & IDEA

4) Writing Development: 11th grade whole class writing instruction / creative projects

A teacher in Detroit has her whole class use the publishing studio to create their own prequel, sequel, or adaptation for a book they've loved. Students share their in-process eBooks with their teacher, who can annotate, and then students publish stories digitally to share with classmates.

Funding Source: COVID Relief Funds
